Broadway's best honored

By Jacqueline Cutler

TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

If offices around the world had pools for the Tony Awards the way they do the Oscars, the money this year would be on "The Producers." It's been decades since a show took Broadway with such force. The day after it opened to rave reviews, Mel Brooks' zany story about the production of "Springtime for Hitler" made $3 million on advance ticket sales.

"Producers" stars Nathan Lane and Matthew Broderick host the Tonys this year. But to watch the entire program on Sunday, June 3, viewers need to have the remote handy. For the fifth consecutive year, the three-hour telecast is split. PBS airs the first hour,

"The First Ten Awards: Tonys 2001," and CBS follows with "The 55th Annual Tony Awards."

Given that so many television events have preshows, some people mistake the PBS broadcast for an advance. Rather, the awards bestowed during this hour are some of the most important, including best direction of a play, best direction of a musical, best choreography, best original score written for the theater, best book of a musical and best costume design.

PBS airs the awards live from Radio City Music Hall and shows behind-the-scenes footage. These segments, taped weeks in advance, are designed to give viewers a better idea of what goes into the making of a Broadway production.

That '70s Show

Kitty (Debra Jo Rupp) is upset when her husband Red (Kurtwood Smith) forgets her birthday at 7 p.m. Tuesday on Fox.

A magazine writer (Elizabeth Mitchell) is courted for a job at an unconventional TV news operation airing at 9 p.m. Wednesday on ABC.

The Beast

Yancy Butler stars in the new series Witchblade as Sara Pezzini, a police detective who has an edge on crimefighting, thanks to a mystical weapon at 8 p.m. Tuesday on TNT.

TNT cuts close to reality

By Stephen English
TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

There's a new butt-kicking babe on the prime-time block. And Yancy Butler doesn't think she'll have a problem fitting in.

"I'm aware of the other shows, but I must admit I haven't seen them. I do know that, unlike Xena, our show may be fantasy-based, but it's also reality-based," says the star of Witchblade, which premieres at 8 p.m. Tuesday, June 12, on TNT.

What differentiates her series from such femme ferocityfests as Dark Angel and Buffy the Vampire Slayer is a quality that made The X-Files so great in its first few seasons.

It's the One Big Whopper deal: The show asks you to suspend your disbelief of one outrageous element of the premise, and from that point on, it steers much closer to plausibility. To enjoy The X-Files, one has to accept that FBI agents are chasing UFOs. In Witchblade, it's a little more complicated.

"You do have to suspend your judgment a bit," Butler says. "Bottom line, I play a New York homicide detective who has this fantastical situation, which is this thing on my wrist that not only gives me visions and makes me feel like I'm losing my mind, but helps me (fight) crimes (and) sometimes hinders me (in fighting) crimes."

"So unlike the other shows, it's like a reality-based show with these fantastic situations. To me, that makes it even more scary and more poignant."

'Primetime Glick' features a barely recognizable Martin Short as inept and self-absorbed talk show host Jiminy Glick at 9:30 p.m. Wednesday on Comedy Central.

Short unleashes alter ego

By John Crook

TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

Martin Short's real-life talk show may have stiffed several months ago, but that hasn't stopped the popular actor and comic from devising "Primetime Glick," a talk show spoof featuring his inept alter ego Jiminy Glick.

The new half-hour series premieres Wednesday on Comedy Central.

Even compared to Short's previous gallery of zany characters he honed on "SCTV" and "Saturday Night Live," the rotund and spectacularly incompetent Glick is in a class by himself, as he conducts totally improvised interviews with celebrities such as Dennis Miller, Jerry Seinfeld and Kathie Lee Gifford. It readily becomes apparent that Glick, while seemingly sweet-natured and a bit fey, is far more interested in listening to himself talk than in anything his guests might have to say.

"I can't honestly say I personally have sat next to a talk show host like Jiminy, but certainly I have been on junkets where I notice that the eyes of the person who is interviewing me are glazing over and he or she isn't really hearing what I'm saying," Short says. "The thing with Jiminy is that really he is far more interested in talking about himself than his guest. You'll notice that he barely takes a breath, and his guests have a hard time getting a word in edgewise, because Jiminy just wants to keep hearing himself talk."

'Gormenghast' dazzles the senses

By John Crook
TVDATA FEATURES WRITER

A masterpiece of British fantasy comes to dazzling life as "Gormenghast" airs Wednesday and Thursday on PBS.

Based on two of three post-World War II novels by Mervyn Peake, the lavish BBC/PBS co-production charts the rise of a ruthless kitchen boy through the social strata of a magnificent but crumbling castle. Its themes of treachery, madness and honor on a Shakespearean scale have led scholars to view the work as an allegory for the fall of an empire and the rise of fascism.

It's also wildly, weirdly hilarious.

"Gormenghast" opens with the birth of Titus, the 77th Earl of Groan, an event that precipitates growing unrest. Agitating the revolution is Steerpike (Jonathan Rhys Meyers), a cunning kitchen worker who schemes to outwit, outplay and outlast anyone who stands in his way to the top.

His methodical game plan includes seducing Titus' beautiful yet childlike older sister, Fuchsia (Neve McIntosh), as well as driving the 76th Earl, Lord Sepulgrave (Ian Richardson), into Learlike madness.

It's a grotesque and often hilarious yarn that walks a fine line between tragedy and black comedy — and if it took director Andy Wilson five years to get it to the small screen, virtually every minute of that loving care is evident in this stunning production.
